

Printer-Friendly Version E-mail This Story

TOP STORIES

On student health, non-profits step in when schools can't do the job

Future in Chicago unclear for undocumented workers

In Hispanic soccer league, Japanese team stands out

More than the Bible: Blacks say church should have role in social issues, politics

Alarming. Galling. Fraudulent. Illinois politics as usual - but not if panel does its job

Community organizing in Uptown: From telephone trees to the Internet

FEATURED COVERAGE

The Great Escape: Why American moviegoers are flooding theaters

Increase in bankruptcies causes law firms to expand staffs

Who needs an English garden when a prairie-style one is, um, right outside our doors

'I think there are other things to get rid of in your life before you get rid of self-fulfillment'

Free screenings help teens get to the heart of their cardiac risks

Offshore wind farm on Evanston's horizon?

CHICAGO LIFE

End violence by fighting? That's goal at fighting gym

More than the Bible: Blacks say church should have role in social issues, politics

New tenants at your birdbath? Global warming may be to blame

VIDEO

Does the gas really have to be premium?

Economy may not, but auto show goes vroom

As the economy worsens, animal shelters fill up

SCIENCE

Study shows mental illness common, ignored in young offenders

Ad campaign on public transit celebrates gay men's health

Embryonic stem cell research divides religious 'right'

BUSINESS

Andersonville a safe haven for some in real estate debacle

February retail sales down 0.1 percent but not as bad as forecast

Management shakeup gives Morse Theatre a second chance

Melissa Suran/MEDILL

How aware would YOU be if someone tried to steal your watch right off of your wrist? Magician Apollo Robbins said not very. At an event at the Chicago Cultural Center on March 9, the professional con teamed up with neurologist Susana Martinez-Conde to talk about illusions in art through the ages and to demonstrate how unperceptive people really are.

Eye of a liar: Professional con artist and neurologist talk about the 'magic' of perception

BY MELISSA SURAN
MARCH 18, 2009

Related Links

I Steal Stuff

Chicago Cultural Center

Science Chicago

Ars Scientia